

The only television I watch regularly is PBS. In my area I can get a signal without cable but the signal is rather poor even though I live in the second largest city in Oregon. We frequently lose our signal as we did last month for several weeks. I looked into getting PBS on the cable system here and this is what I found out. Basic cable here is only $13 a month but our public television is not included in that package. To receive PBS one must subscribe to the next higher bracket, extended cable which costs $41.55. There are no choices in between. The FCC in my opinion should require cable companies to include PBS in their lowest cost package, after all it is PUBLIC television. Please feel free to email me regarding this issue. Thank you, B Boettcher.
